MAKING PROGRESS

Dr. Wesley G. Bieritz, President, ISVMA

In sports, we're taught that whether you win or lose isn't as important as how you play the game. I've thought about that advice many times as ISVMA has been battling bad legislation in the ISVMA has also been very active in the State Capitol. The bills that have gained the most attention are House Bill 315 and Senate Bill 2078 ($3 rabies tax for state managed, low-cost spay/neuter program). Many ISVMA members have spoken to their legislators regarding their concerns with these bills. Additionally, the ISVMA Board and Legislative Committee held an informal "Lobby Day" on March 8, 2005 and spent a day in the Capitol lobbying legislators on these and other issues of importance to the veterinary profession. Those that participated in the Lobby Day were thrilled by the experience and it had a marked influence on the issues we were lobbying. ISVMA has played hard and fair. We've also made significant progress on the issues we've advocated for the profession. The tremendous support from member veterinarians is the most important component of our success—and the level of participation grows every week. Your association is growing not only in numbers. It is growing in influence because of your support and involvement!

PROGRESS ON SALES TAX ISSUES

Peter S. Weber, CAE Executive Director, ISVMA

ISVMA has been negotiating with the Illinois Department of Revenue (IDOR) in an effort to end a series of veterinary tax audits that have occurred in

- The IDOR will no longer use a product-by-product analysis to determine whether the Retail Occupation Tax applies to a sale. In other words, there would no longer be a mystical and everchanging list of items that are considered retail. Rather, the state would determine the tax classification of a product based upon how the product is delivered. If it is delivered incident to medical service, it will be treated as Service Occupation Tax.
- The IDOR will develop (with input from ISVMA) an information bulletin that explains to veterinary practices how to apply the tax laws and regulations to assure their compliance. The bulletin will be designed for clarity and simplicity as well as completeness.
- There are other issues being discussed (but not ready for dissemination) that will serve the purpose of shining a bright light on compliance to avoid the types of adverse audit findings this profession has been accustomed to enduring.

ISVMA has benefited from the counsel of Mike Scaduto and his colleagues at J.D. Michael & Associates – an audit consulting firm in Springfield, Illinois. Mike is the retired Manager of the Audit Bureau at IDOR and has an extensive background in assisting business and industry with audit issues. Mike and his firm have assisted veterinary practices under audit and helped reduce the impact of audit findings. They have also been instrumental in our negotiations with IDOR to clarify the application of tax laws and avoid future "gotcha" audits.

When the details of an agreement are available, members will be notified initially through an E-SOURCE newsletter. We expect the IDOR will issue an information bulletin to all affected taxing bodies and ISVMA will plan to hold a series of meetings to provide expanded information to practices in order to help them understand how the changes will affect them and how they can avoid future adverse audits through a streamlined definition of compliance.

LEGISLATIVE CALLS TO ACTION

Recipients of the E-SOURCE
Newsletter have been asked several times over the past few weeks to contact their legislators to express the ISVMA opposition to House Bill 315 (The Animal Overpopulation Control Act).
Hundreds of veterinarians across the state have responded to the call to action and clearly expressed their concerns related to the state imposing a $3 tax on rabies vaccinations to fund a state-managed low-cost/no-cost spay neuter program.

In the past, many veterinarians felt that they didn't need to be active in the legislative process. Others weren't comfortable with speaking to their elected officials. However, it has become critical that every Illinois veterinarian challenge herself/himself to become politically engaged. Other interest groups are very active in promoting animal health and welfare policies. If veterinarians don't become more involved, these groups will be determining the policies to which veterinarians will have to conform.

ARE YOU ON-LINE AND IN THE KNOW?

The ISVMA utilizes a communication tool vital to our members, the E-SOURCE. This electronic newsletter is an essential component to keeping members informed and current. Are you willing to miss a timely piece of news? How long is too long to wait to know what has happened at the Capitol or if regulatory issues change?

How critical can a timely piece of information be? The Illinois Department of Public Health and the Illinois Department of Agriculture have utilized the E-SOURCE to disseminate critical information such as the identification of positive rabies-infected terrestrial animals in north-central Illinois. The ISVMA uses the E-SOURCE to keep members updated on key legislative and regulatory decisions – while they are being made! – in Springfield. Because of E-SOURCE, you can be involved in influencing public policies that impact your profession!

In analyzing our membership database*, the figures representing members who haven't forwarded their email addresses show that there are a number of you who are underserved.

	Affiliate Members	33.3%
	Graduate School Members	40.0%
	Inactive Members	50.0%

There are still too many members who don't take advantage of the E-SOURCE. Be assured that ISVMA database information is not sold to outside sources. Additionally, you will receive no spam as a result of forwarding your email address to the ISVMA office.

Which group do you wish to be part of: those who do receive up-to-the-minute information or those who wait for the printed word? If you have an e-mail address and aren't getting the ISVMA's electronic newsletter, you are missing out. The way to stay informed is through the E-SOURCE.

ISVMA is building its grassroots legislative capacity at a crucial time. There will likely be a number of bills and regulations introduced that will result in ISVMA asking its members to make phone calls or write letters to their elected officials. Please understand that each of these issues is important on its own, but developing a relationship with your legislators is even more important.

Two years ago, a well-funded group of alternative and complementary therapy groups were able to briefly stop the passage of the Veterinary Medicine & Surgery Practice Act! They demanded concessions to YOUR statutory authorization to practice veterinary medicine and, in some cases, compromises had to be made to get the Practice Act passed.

Hundreds of veterinarians have been involved in lobbying House Bill 315 and have now developed relationships with their legislators that will become extremely important the next time the Veterinary Medicine & Surgery Practice Act sunsets. We want legislators to defend your right to practice veterinary medicine! They should not even consider other groups' arguments that the practice of veterinary medicine should be extended to non-veterinarians.

Develop relationships with your legislators before you need their vote! Write letters or make phone calls to your elected officials when ISVMA requests your help. Invite them to visit your practice or meet with them to discuss your interest in issues that advance the well-being of veterinarians, animals, the public and the environment. If legislators know you as a valuable resource for information when you call, they are more likely to listen to your positions on key policies.

If you are not sure what's going on right now at the Capitol, visit the Legislation link on the ISMVMA website and check out the bill tracker. This list is updated weekly and tells you the status of every bill being monitored or lobbied by ISVMA. If you don't already receive the ISVMA's electronic newsletter, the E-SOURCE, send your e-mail address to info@isvma.org and ask to be added to the distribution list.

*Approximately 1100 Illinois veterinarians are now receiving the E-SOURCE Newsletter by e-mail. It is a critical tool for keeping you updated and informed of the latest legislative and regulatory developments.

EPITOME News & Notes

ISVMA Lobby Day a Success

The ISVMA Board of Directors and Legislative Committee held a "Lobby Day" in Springfield on March 8, 2005 in conjunction with the regular ISVMA Board meeting.

In the morning, the ISVMA lobbyists briefed the veterinarians on the key issues and the protocol for lobbying at the Capitol. During the next four hours the veterinarians visited legislators in their offices, outside of the legislative chambers and in hallways throughout the Capitol complex.

One of the key issues the veterinarians lobbied was House Bill 315 – The Pet Overpopulation Control Act. The ISVMA opposes this legislation which establishes a state-managed, low-cost spay neuter program funded by a state tax of $3 on the rabies vaccination.

Illinois' veterinarians are committed to efforts to reduce the number of unwanted and abandoned animals in Illinois and to advance the well-being of animals and the public. All across the state, veterinarians participate in existing programs to provide low-cost spays/neuters, promote animal adoption, and encourage responsible pet ownership that includes appropriate vaccination, preventative health maintenance.

House Bill 315 has a laudable goal of trying to reduce the number of unwanted animals in the State and Illinois veterinarians support this goal. However, ISVMA has very serious concerns about how the proponents attempt to achieve the objective:

- 1. House Bill 315 increases the tax on rabies vaccinations $3 per year, placing an unfair tax burden on responsible pet owners who properly vaccinate their animals. This additional tax on rabies vaccinations is a further disincentive for people to vaccinate pets against a dangerous and deadly disease. In many cases, the existing taxes imposed by local and county governments already exceed the cost of the vaccine.
- 2. During the past year, Illinois experienced a significant increase in the diagnosis of bat rabies. Skunk rabies was recently diagnosed in two domestic animals in north-central Illinois (a cow and a horse). Raccoon rabies is also rapidly spreading west toward Illinois. Illinois veterinarians and public health officials are concerned about the convergence of these three separate strains of rabies in Illinois at a time when rabies vaccination compliance in the state is less than 50%. Any government program that relies upon funds generated by an increase in the tax on rabies vaccination is dangerous public policy.
- 3. House Bill 315 exempts farm dogs from county registration requirements creating a situation where those animals most likely to be exposed to rabies would no longer have to verify their compliance status with counties.
- 4. Any program aimed at reducing the stray population in Illinois must include a public relations campaign to educate pet owners about the benefits of spay/neuter because lack of education is the greatest barrier to population control. The ISVMA supports alternate funding proposals that would equitably generate funds to provide responsible pet ownership education and promote effective population control programs.

At the conclusion of the Lobby Day, veterinarians reported that they felt extremely empowered by the experience. They felt the ISVMA position had been clearly expressed to the legislators and that many legislators had committed to support the veterinarians' position on the bill.

New Link on Member Center Site

In the last issue of the Epitome we highlighted a website that included a complete listing of Illinois state representatives and senators. That website is http://www.ilga.gov/sitemap.asp.

A more convenient means for ISVMA members to access legislative information has been added to ISVMA's website! By visiting the Legislation link in the Member Center, you may now search for your legislator's name and contact information.

Why is this so important? It's important because you, as an individual, have the power to influence the laws that regulate your profession.

The legislature is in session right now with new laws being drafted, introduced and adopted. Illinois veterinarians should be considered the experts on issues related to animal health and welfare. However, they will not be heard unless they develop relationships with the legislators voting on these issues.

Editor's note: Senate Bill 2078 was introduced after the Lobby Day and includes the same objectionable language as House Bill 315.

MEET THE NEW FARMS TEAM

In January 2003, the two large animal services at our Veterinary Teaching Hospital—the food animal medicine and surgery service and the production medicine/theriogenology/ambulatory service—combined to form the Farm Animal Reproduction, Medicine and Surgery service, or FARMS. I'd like to take this opportunity to bring you up to date on impressive accomplishments by the FARMS group over the past two years: major renovations have enhanced their medical and teaching facilities; they've hired seven new faculty members; and they've established focus areas to better serve their clients and the agricultural animal industries.

I hope many of you will take the opportunity to see these changes for yourselves at the FARMS Open House, slated for May 21. There will be presentations from many of the clinicians and a chance to meet them, ask questions, and see the facilities.

A key feature of the recent renovations in the food animal ward is the new central animal handling system, which safely moves a large number of cattle from the truck to a sorting tub and then to one of three treatment chutes, weighing them in the process. Stalls have been modernized, with new swing-gate fronts, restraint panels, and automatic watering systems; stalls specifically designed for housing bulls and for smaller animals—sheep, goats, camelids, and deer—have been added, and stalls with rubber or sand flooring are available. The treatment room has also been renovated with new cabinetry, a llama chute, an outpatient surgery area for minor procedures, and a new laboratory for student use.

State-of-the-art digital presentation equipment improves the teaching resources in the ambulatory office as well as in a new FARMS rounds room. The ambulatory area also has renovated faculty workspaces, a new vehicle for farm visits, and four new ultrasound machines. Kim Kensell, a long-time employee of the Small Animal Clinic, was hired as the first certified veterinary technician to assist with theriogenology and field service activities. Connie Arnold, a section member for over 15 years, still serves as the veterinary technician for the food animal medicine and surgery service.

The most exciting aspect of the new FARMS section is the tremendous depth and breadth of expertise among the faculty. The section's faculty boast a total of seven PhD degrees. Eight hold specialty board certification, including five in theriogenology. Indeed, theriogenology—including routine and advanced reproduction services for ruminants, horses, swine, cervids, and camelids, and a new canine reproduction program—is a key focus area identified by the section. Other focus areas are internal medicine and population health and food safety.

A renewed emphasis on graduate education is also planned, with ample faculty eligible to serve as PhD and master's advisers. Five graduate students and a post doctoral student are currently participating in research projects. Dr. Jack Herrmann, who has a master's degree in public health, is a key contributor to a new College program that allows students to earn DVM and MPH degrees in 5 years.

Among this large group of faculty, several have considerable administrative appointments. For example, Dr. Peter Constable is currently interim head of the Department of Veterinary Clinical Medicine as well as the department's director of research and graduate studies. Dr. Dawn Morin not only serves as section leader but also as assistant department head for curriculum and instruction. Dr. Morin also holds the position of Attending Veterinarian for Agricultural Animals in the new campus-wide Agricultural Animal Care and Use Program. This program ensures appropriate veterinary care and promotes well-being for agricultural animals used in research and teaching.

Five other FARMS faculty members contribute veterinary expertise to this program, which is housed in the Large Animal Clinic.

Whether or not you can join us for the May 21 FARMS Open House, I hope you will familiarize yourself with the roster of top-notch clinicians and researchers who form our FARMS team which is listed on the following page. Give them a call for consultations in their areas of expertise, and as always, feel free to contact me at dean@cvm.uiuc.edu.

Safe Handling of Micotil 300

On March 8, 2003, a Nebraska cattleman died after accidental self-injection of the antibiotic. A second fatality occurred April 24, 2004 in Wyoming as a farmer attempted to administer the drug. Micotil, tilmicosin phosphate, is a long-acting macrolide used in large animal medicine for the treatment of Bovine Respiratory Disease Complex. Elanco Animal Health first introduced it in the United States in 1992 as a single-injection therapy that reduces farm labor and stress on the animal. It is to be administered subcutaneous in the neck or shoulder area at a dosage of 1.5 ml per 100 lbs. of animal weight.

The minimum amount to cause a fatality is not known and thus the drug always should be handled with great care. However, a 28 year-old male injected about one-half of a 12 cc syringe into his forearm. He experienced severe chest pains approximately 5 hours later. Upon hospitalization he was incubated for 10 hours and discharged in 3 days.

The target of the toxicity is the cardiovascular system leading to cardiac arrest and respiratory failure. There is no antidote. The label and fact sheet contain information for the physician and emergency medical telephone numbers. The Material Safety Data Sheet has a first aid section with expanded human health information. Veterinarians should talk to local physicians and provide them with fact sheets and emergency numbers.

There have always been human warnings on the label, however, since the accident in 2003 the warnings have been updated to include: "Injection of this drug in humans has been associated with fatalities"; "In case of human injection, consult a physician immediately, apply ice to the injection site and provide supportive treatment." The emergency phone numbers are (800) 722-0987 or (317) 276-2000.

Elanco has also distributed posters in both English and Spanish illustrating safe handling practices. A fact sheet, in duplicate, entitled "Micotil Client Dispensing Information" is available that should be signed by both the purchaser and veterinarian at the time of sale. These posters and information pads are available from Elanco and should be near every user's drug cabinet. Talk to your sales representative if you have not received them. There are several tools available on their website, www.elanco.com/us/safe-handling.jsp.

The posters and fact sheet outline proper handling and administration producers. However, a very simple recommendation is to not apply the needle to the syringe until the animal is securely restrained and the individual is by the animal's side ready to inject. Micotil is sold in multiple dose bottles with a protective case available that shields the hand holding the bottle from an accidental needle stab. Therefore, load the syringe in a safe locations, remove the needle from the syringe, travel to the animal, reapply the needle and inject subcutaneous (do not pinch the skin) to properly restrained animals. Do not ever use in automatically powered syringes.

This is a reminder that many of the drugs and biologics used in both large and small animal practice can be hazardous. We must be cautious in not becoming complacent in their use and ensure that those handling the materials are properly trained.

Thank you to the WVMA Public Health and Food Safety Committee for volunteering to write about this important topic. — WVMA editors

DR. MARK ERNST TO SERVE AS STATE VETERINARIAN AND BUREAU CHIEF OF ANIMAL HEALTH

The Illinois Department of Agriculture has promoted a longtime staff veterinarian to fill key positions responsible for protecting the health of the state's livestock. Dr. Mark Ernst, 45, of Washington, Ill., has been named state veterinarian and bureau chief of Animal Health. Ernst worked in private practice for five years after earning his Doctor of Veterinary Medicine degree from the University of Illinois in 1984. He joined the state Department of Agriculture in 1989 as a field veterinarian in the Bureau of Animal Health.

"Protecting the health of our state's livestock to ensure it remains marketable around the world is an extremely important job, and Mark is exceptionally qualified to handle the challenge," Dr. Colleen O'Keefe, division manager of Food Safety and Animal Protection, said. "He has a thorough understanding of the state's animal health regulations, and the relationships he has developed with farmers and fellow veterinarians the past 15 years will be a tremendous asset as he begins his new duties." Dr. O'Keefe has held the titles of state veterinarian and bureau chief of Animal Health since the retirement of Dr. Richard Hull in June of 2003.

"With the cooperation of producers and local veterinarians, our bureau has successfully eliminated animal diseases such as hog cholera, bovine tuberculosis, bovine brucellosis and pseudorabies." Dr. Ernst said. "While we're proud of our accomplishments, much work remains to be done. Illinois agriculture increasingly relies upon export sales for income, and as trade barriers are removed we become more susceptible to foreign animal diseases." Ernst is qualified as a foreign animal disease diagnostician. He completed an intensive training program in 1998 at the Foreign Animal Disease Center in Plum Island, N.Y., a federal laboratory operated jointly by the USDA and U.S. Department of Homeland Security.

In addition to detecting and eliminating animal diseases, the Bureau of Animal Health licenses livestock auction markets, livestock dealers and slaughter livestock buyers. It also regulates the transport of farm animals to ensure they are shipped appropriately.

The ISMVA congratulates Dr. Ernst (ISVMA member since 1993) on his promotion. The ISVMA would also like to recognize Dr. Colleen O'Keefe (ISVMA member since 2004) for her efforts as interim state veterinarian. Best wishes to both and our thanks for their contributions to the veterinary profession in Illinois and nationwide.

NOMINATIONS OPEN FOR ISVMA ACTS AWARDS

The ISVMA's Human-Animal Bond/Animal Welfare Committee is seeking nominees for its annual Animals Contributing To Society (ACTS) Awards: Hero, Volunteer, Professional and Human-Animal Bond Awards.

The Hero Award recognizes an animal whose actions saved a human life or prevented injury. The Professional Award recognizes an animal whose purpose is to be of service to humans. This includes seeing-eye dogs, helper dogs, assisted therapy animals as well as animals in zoos and aquariums. The Human-Animal Bond Award recognizes the human whose acts best advance the understanding and awareness of the Human-Animal Bond in Illinois.

Nominations are open to any animal that has made an extraordinary contribution to their owners' lives, their neighborhood, or their community. Each category celebrates a specific contribution to the human-animal relationship.

Qualifications for each nomination are simple:

THE AVMA AND FORT DODGE ANIMAL HEALTH LAUNCH SPRING PET WELLNESS CAMPAIGN

Educating pet owners about preventable threats to pet health and the importance of twice-a-year pet wellness exams is the focus of the spring 2005 National Pet Wellness Month (NPWM) campaign sponsored by the American Veterinary Medical Association (AVMA) and Fort Dodge Animal Health.

AVMA President Bonnie V. Beaver, DVM, said, "Disease prevention is as critical a part of today's veterinary practice as is the treatment of illness. As our clients' focus on pet health increases, the benefits of twice-a-year pet wellness exams become obvious.

Commenting on the spring NPWM campaign, Stephen Jaffe, DVM, Fort Dodge Animal Health's Director of Field Veterinary Services, said participating veterinary clinics will receive valuable tools to help educate clients about the various diseases threatening pets and the lifesaving benefits of disease prevention. "Know Your Pet's Preventable Threats" tools include posters, client literature and clinic educational materials. "Spring is when disease-carrying mosquitoes, ticks and fleas start becoming active and a threat to pets," said Dr. Jaffe. "Disease can also be contracted by exposure to wildlife, other pets and even standing water. Fortunately, pet owners can protect their pets from many common diseases by having their veterinarian thoroughly assess the pet's exposure to environmental risks, conduct a wellness exam every six months and administer appropriate vaccinations."

The AVMA and Fort Dodge Animal Health reported more than 10,000 veterinary clinics, about 40% of all U.S. clinics, signed-up for the inaugural NPWM campaign in the fall of 2004. They also reported that the fall 2004 campaign achieved over 91,000,000 consumer impressions through a national publicity effort. "Sign-up for the fall 2004 National Pet Wellness Month campaign far exceeded everyone's expectation," said Dr. Beaver. "And the overwhelmingly positive response we heard from veterinarians and clinic staff following the initial campaign strongly encouraged us to move forward with plans for this spring."

Veterinary clinics that participated in the fall 2004 NPWM campaign will automatically receive a free spring 2005 NPWM In-Clinic Education Kit. Clinics wishing to receive their free NPWM kids can do so by:

- Visiting the NPWM Web site at www.npwm.com, or
- Sending an e-mail containing a contact name, clinic name, shipping address and telephone number to info@nationalpetwellnessmonth.com, or

WHAT'S IN A LICENSE?

Spring is a busy time at the Illinois Department of Financial and Professional Regulation as applications for licensure by examination are reviewed and processed. As of October 2004, there are 3,710 licensed veterinarians and 612 certified veterinary technicians in the state of Illinois. Approximately 75 to 80 thousand veterinarians are licensed in the nation. It is difficult to know the exact number since many hold licenses in more than one state. Each year, over 4,000 applicants take the national licensing exam (NAVLE) resulting in at least 3,600 newly licensed veterinarians in the US.

Licensure is the most restrictive form of professional regulation, compared to registration and certification. It is reserved for occupations providing complex services with the potential of causing serious public harm and the qualifications for which would be difficult for John Q. Citizen to determine without a licensure process that establishes specific requirements. Simply put, a license offers the public some assurance that a veterinarian is competent and ethical. This public protection purpose is reflected in the preamble of the Illinois Veterinary Medicine and Surgery Practice Act of 2004 which reads,

"The practice of veterinary medicine in the State of Illinois is declared to affect the public health, safety and welfare and to be subject to State regulation and control in the public interest. It is further declared to be a matter of public interest and concern that the veterinary profession merit and receive the confidence of the public and that only qualified and licensed persons be permitted to practice veterinary medicine." (225 ILCS 115/1)

Typically, the professional association seeks to have a profession licensed. Such regulation occurs only through the formal action of a legislative body that defines the scope of practice in licensing laws or "practice acts". Such laws essentially grant a monopoly to those individuals who qualify for licensure and make it illegal for unlicensed individuals to engage in activities described in the "practice acts". To protect the public from unlicensed practice of veterinary medicine, the Illinois Veterinary Practice Act includes strong language regarding unlicensed practice.

In Illinois, professional regulation of veterinarians dates back to 1899. It is interesting to note that the first amendments to the veterinary practice act were made in 1961. Now, the practice act "sunsets" every ten years, which means it must be repealed and an updated version introduced for legislative review and approval. Many organizations and individuals besides veterinarians expressed opinions about the practice of veterinary medicine during the last sunset of 2004. Veterinarians must be informed and actively participate in the legislative process affecting our profession so that our voice is heard.

Here is a reminder for hospitals eager to put the young graduate to work. Please remember that until receipt of the physical license, the newly graduated veterinarian must not engage in the practice of veterinary medicine including surgery, diagnosis or prescribing. Also, the license must be displayed in public areas. If a licensee rotates in several clinics, a duplicate license must be displayed in all locations. At all times, the public is entitled to know their pet is under the care of a licensed veterinarian in the state of Illinois.

To view the Practice Act, visit www.idfpr.com. For questions about this article, e-mail Dr. Georgie Ludwig at georgieludwig@yahoo.com.

Dr. Georgianne (Georgie) Ludwig is a contributing author to the "Epitome". Her articles address topics regarding veterinary licensure issues regulated by the Illinois Department of Financial and Professional Regulation.

Dr. Ludwig is actively engaged in companion animal practice in west suburban Chicago where she is Hospital Director and Business Partner at Lombard Veterinary Hospital, a seven DVM companion and exotic animal hospital. She is a second generation veterinarian with a special interest in feline medicine and the human-animal bond.

Dr. Ludwig was appointed by Governor Edgar to the Illinois Veterinary Licensing and Disciplinary Board in 1998 where she is currently Chairman. She has served on the American Association of Veterinary State Board's (AAVSB) Executive Committee since 2001 and holds the position of Secretary. She serves on the AAVSB Practice Act Model Taskforce and the Illinois State Veterinary Medical Association's Legislative Committee.

When she isn't actively engaged in her professional career, she cherishes "down time" spent on the beach with her husband Greg, children Gregory and Gracie and dog Scuba. She enjoys SCUBA Diving and she is a Girl Scout Leader.

Firkins Receives Meritorious Service Award

Dr. Larry Firkins, Mahomet, Ill., received the American Association of Swine Veterinarians Meritorious Service Award, in recognition of the time and effort he has consistently given to the association. The award was presented during the association's annual meeting in Toronto, Canada.

Dr. Firkins is an associate professor and extension swine veterinarian at the University of Illinois College of Veterinary Medicine. His professional interests include teaching and conducting research in swine medicine and production, and coordinating the Executive Veterinary Program.

During the award presentation, Dr. Dave Madsen, AASV past president cited examples of Dr. Firkins' dedicated service to the AASV. On the national level, he represents the association on the AVMA Environmental Issues Committee. Closer to home, Dr. Firkins serves as a faculty advisor for the student AASV members at the University of Illinois. "I am humbled to receive this recognition from an organization that I respect," Dr. Firkins said. "Although I have given a lot of my time to the association, I have received more in return than I have given. I am looking forward to continuing to participate in the AASV's promotion and engagement of our student members who are the future of this organization."

He has given numerous presentations and seminars to veterinary and producer groups in the United States, and seven foreign countries. He was recently appointed to serve on the AVMA Task Force on the Housing of Pregnant Sows. Prior to joining the faculty at the University of Illinois in 1995, Dr. Firkins was a partner in the Wyoming Veterinary Service in Wyoming, Ill., where he practiced swine medicine in Central Illinois.

He received his veterinary degree from the University of Illinois in 1986. Since graduation, Dr. Firkins has received an MS in epidemiology (1996), and an MBA (2001) from the University of Illinois. Dr. Firkins and his wife, Ann, have two children, Andrew and Sarah.

Leptospirosis incidence in canines is rising.

But not where you d expect classic lepto. Increasing, high-profile news reports from Boston, San Francisco, New York City and other urban centers underscore epidemiologists new thinking: Lepto now threatens patients in suburban and urban settings.

Now you can reassure clients by learning about these recent lepto findings.

- Leptospirosis is now the No. 1 infectious cause of acute renal failure in dogs.¹
- The emerging serovars grippotyphosa and pomona now cause most cases.²
- You can now protect against grippotyphosa and pomona—without sacrificing protection against the traditional serovars icterohaemorrhagiae and canicola—using Fort Dodges Leptospira vaccines. They re the only lepto vaccines that protect against four serovars.
- Leptospirosis may pose a zoonotic risk to owners.³
- You can trust the safety our subunit manufacturing process provides—only a 0.27 percent reaction rate over 144,000 doses in one recent study.³
