ISVMA ORGANIZING EFFORT WITH VETERINARY STUDENTS TO INCREASE NCVEI PARTICIPATION

Dr. Wesley G. Bieritz, President, ISVMA

ISVMA works to help you improve your practice's economic health and enhance your patient care. To help you accomplish these goals, we recently approached the Veterinary Business Management Association (VBMA) at the University of Illinois to determine their interest in developing a summer project that will help you become a more successful practice.

With support from the ISVMA, three veterinary student members of the VBMA will introduce to you an online practice management program that allows you to evaluate the strengths and weaknesses of your practice's business. Offered by the National Commission on Veterinary Economic Issues (www.ncvei.org), these tools provide a benchmarking comparison between practices across Illinois and the nation. For only $75, one of the students will come to your practice and train you and/or your practice manager on how to use these tools. The fee will help alleviate travel costs for the student representatives, in addition to providing you with CE credit for participation. NCVEI tools will remain available and an asset to your practice for continuing years.

In addition to the current small animal and equine tools, NCVEI will be releasing new benchmarking tools for food animal practitioners in mid-June (refer to the article on page four).

Please contact ISVMA at 217-523-8387 and provide your contact information. The appropriate regional student representative will call your office to schedule your training session.

STATUS OF TAX AUDIT ISSUES

Peter S. Weber, CAE
Executive Director, ISVMA

The ISVMA, in conjunction with JD Michael LLC, has met several times with top-level officials at the Illinois Department of Revenue (IDOR). The purpose of these meetings has been to discuss the resolution of various issues that have arisen from audits being conducted by IDOR auditors in the Chicago area. The following is being offered as a summary of those discussions.

Relevant Law

In 1991, the Illinois legislature enacted changes to the sales tax laws to provide that de minimus service providers could satisfy their Illinois sales tax responsibilities by paying Use Tax to their suppliers. To be considered de minimus, a service provider's cost price of tangible personal property transferred incident to service must be less than 35% of its gross receipts from all sales of service. In short, the changes were enacted in order that people in professional service occupations such as doctors, lawyers and accountants did not have to become registered to charge and collect sales tax if in the course of providing service to their patients or clients they transferred or sold tangible personal property. At the time it was felt that veterinary practices fell within the umbrella of these types of businesses, similar to medical doctors. In fact, the Department of Revenue during its current audit activity has not questioned the fact that veterinary practices are de minimus service providers under the guidelines established by the Service Occupation Tax laws.

The basic problem is that there is a stipulation in the Service Occupation Tax law that says that even though a service provider is de minimus things are different if the service business is otherwise required to be registered as a retailer under the Retailers' Occupation Tax law. In this case the service business cannot satisfy its Illinois sales tax obligations by simply paying Use Tax to their suppliers. The law requires that they purchase all items that will be transferred tax-free and account for the appropriate Service Occupation Tax when these items are transferred to customers, clients, patients, etc. Since the tax in this situation is Service Occupation Tax and not Use Tax there is a local component due when the service business is located in a city or county that has imposed a local tax.

Application of the Law to Veterinarians

So what does this mean for veterinary businesses? Under the department's current audit interpretation, if a veterinary practice makes any kind of retail sale they cannot satisfy their sales tax obligations by paying tax to suppliers, even on items such as medications administered to patients during treatment.

It should be noted that the department audits have uncovered that some veterinarians are selling products other than flea and tick preventions that would classify them as retailers. Shampoos and non-prescription foods are the two most common products that are cited.

ISVMA Proposal

The ISVMA in conjunction with the professional advice from JD Michael has proposed several things in their meetings with the department.

In order to resolve the dilemma and avoid continual arguments as to what products are retail sales and what products are medications transferred incident to professional services, we have proposed that the department seek guidance from an Illinois Supreme court case, Illinois Cereal Mills v. Department of Revenue (1982). In this case the court held that a small amount of accommodation retail sales (less than 3%) made by a wholesale business to its resale customers was not sufficient activity to subject the company to be considered a retailer subject to the provisions of the Retailers' Occupation Tax Act.

We have asked the department to apply the same logic to veterinary businesses that the court in Illinois Cereal Mills applied to a wholesale business. In other words, a small amount of retail sales (less than 3% of total revenue) that is made as an accommodation to patients would not be sufficient activity to classify the business as required to be registered as a retailer. If the department accepts this proposal, veterinary businesses will not be required to be registered with the Department of Revenue as long as their retail activity is less than 3% and any retail sale within this threshold is being made to regular customers. In this situation, veterinary practices will be allowed to satisfy all sales tax obligations by paying tax to their suppliers. We believe this was the intent of the legislature when the Service Occupation Tax laws were changed in 1991. Only if a veterinary practice purchases items from an out-of-state supplier that does not collect Illinois tax will the practice be required to be registered with the department.

We have also expressed our belief that the department's interpretation relating to what constitutes a retail sale as it applies to veterinarians is beyond the scope of the Service Occupation Tax statutes. We feel that any medication that is sold along with a regular treatment program for the overall health of an animal is being transferred within a service situation and is not a retail sale. This includes flea and tick medications such as Advantage and Frontline sold and applied to animals under a veterinarian's care, irrespective of whether the product was prescribed as a result of an exam.

However, if we prevail on the first argument, this second argument is less of an issue. It will only be important if we do not prevail on the first point.

ISVMA Advice

If you have been previously audited, currently under audit or scheduled for an audit by the Department of Revenue, we strongly advise you to contact JD Michael at 217-527-1700 and consider retaining them to help you. If you have not been audited or have not been contacted for an audit, we advise you to hold tight and wait for a final resolution to the proposals we have made to the Department of Revenue. The ISVMA hopes to have classes at various locations around the state later this year to assist you in doing things correctly.

In the meantime, we would suggest that if a supplier is not charging you tax on medications that you are administering to patients in your clinic that you ask them to start charging tax. We have found that some suppliers of Illinois veterinary practices are not charging tax.

WELCOME NEW MEMBERS!

ISVMA would like to welcome the following 96 new members (who joined between March 26, 2005 and May 17, 2005). ISVMA is still growing toward the Board established goal of 2000 members by July 1, 2007. Please help us spread the news about the many benefits of membership in ISVMA – where dues are an investment that pays tremendous dividends!

NCVEI Food Animal and Mixed Animal Benchmarking Tools

The National Commission on Veterinary Economic Issues (NCVEI) is preparing to launch benchmarking tools for food and mixed animal practitioners.

To date they have released benchmarking tools for companion animal and equine veterinarians. There are currently 10,000 practices utilizing these free tools in all 50 states.

Before the food and mixed animal tools can be released NCVEI needs volunteers who are willing to enter seed data in the models.

If you are willing to participate, contact Peter Weber at ISVMA (peter@isvma.org) to obtain an instruction letter for entering the seed data. As in the past the more people who participate in this process the more effective job the NCVEI models will be in helping practitioners in Illinois. Full release of the benchmarking tools is planned for late spring.

ISVMA 2005 Convention Featured Keynote Speaker

Kevin Fitzgerald, Ph.D., D.V.M.
 featured veterinarian on Animal Planet's Emergency Vets

In addition to being featured on Emergency Vets, Dr. Fitzgerald is also a staff veterinarian in Denver, a frequent lecturer, and a part-time (and very funny) stand-up comedian.

Bring your entire team to this year's convention to laugh with Dr. Fitzgerald, learn from expert speakers, and enjoy numerous social events and networking opportunities.

With our thanks ...

Dr. Richard Hull, Springfield, recently ended his 14 year tenure for the ISVMA as the ISVMA's Delegate to the AVMA.

Dr. George Richards filled the position left by Dr. Hull and is currently the ISVMA Delegate to the AVMA. Dr. Shelly Rubin was voted into position by the Board of Directors to fill Dr. Richard's vacated position of ISVMA Alternate Delegate to the AVMA.

Thank you to all these ISVMA members for their interest and willingness to serve our association. Your time and talents are appreciated!

Membership renewal

Current memberships expire on June 30 and the ISVMA office has been busy forwarding membership renewal packets. If you have not received yours in the mail, you can either renew your membership or apply by:

- Visiting us online at www.isvma.org. Fill out your form electronically and submit with payment preferences checked. We will bill you or you can pay immediately with your credit card!
- Calling our office at (217) 523-8387 and we'll be happy to forward another packet to you!

MESSAGE FROM DEAN HERBERT WHITELEY

University of Illinois College of Veterinary Medicine

ILLINOIS FACULTY ARE LEADERS IN TAKING A SCHOLARLY APPROACH TO VETERINARY EDUCATION

On May 15, our College proudly awarded diplomas to the 103 members of the Class of 2005. As these new graduates fan out across the country to pursue internships, further study, and positions at practices, I reflect on the remarkable work of our faculty. Over the past four years, they have transmitted the skills and knowledge needed by competent entry-level practitioners to this new generation of veterinarians.

To ensure that our graduates have the necessary competence, Illinois faculty have become world leaders in scholarship on the effectiveness of veterinary clinical education. Nearly 20 years ago Dr. Ann Johnson, professor of small animal surgery, partnered with a faculty member from the College of Education, James Farmer, to investigate which teaching methods were most effective for teaching surgery skills. Her goals were to improve veterinary surgical education, to minimize the use of live animals, and to focus on training.

Dr. Johnson's findings resulted in adjustments in the surgery curriculum, which in turn led to more studies to evaluate teaching approaches and document the skills that new graduates need to know.

Other Illinois small animal surgery faculty members joined Dr. Johnson in this work. Dr. Cathy Greenfield led the effort to develop soft tissue models for use in surgery laboratories and to evaluate the surgical performance of students trained using models vs. live animal laboratories. Subsequent studies assessed outcomes, from the perspective of both the new graduates and their employers. The findings documented that use of models was an effective teaching approach, and the curriculum evolved accordingly.

"There were no 'regular' and 'alternative' surgical education programs at Illinois as there were at other U.S. veterinary schools," says Dr. Greenfield, "We were the alternative program."

More recently, Drs. Greenfield and Johnson have conducted large-scale surveys of veterinary employers to identify the "need to know" entry-level skills in small animal practice. "We seek practitioners' input," affirms Dr. Johnson. "We believe they are our customers and they know their needs."

Today Illinois' small animal surgical teaching program culminates in the spay procedure performed on dogs and cats from local humane societies. This hands-on survival laboratory encompasses all the surgical techniques that need to be taught as well as the pre-operative evaluation and post-operative care components.

"It's a problem solved," says Dr. Johnson. "This is a program we can be proud of. We've worked very hard to produce a student who meets practitioners' expectations."

On the food animal side, Drs. Dawn Morin and Peter Constable adapted the survey approach used by Drs. Greenfield and Johnson to assess the food animal-related skills and knowledge needed by entry-level practitioners.

The research question arose in response to a general perception that individual medical procedures were less relevant in the veterinary curriculum given the rise of more specialized production medicine approaches. The results of their survey, which incorporated the responses of more than 1,000 large animal veterinarians in the United States, revealed a demand for a balance between individual medical skills and population-based skills.

“You have to be able to diagnose the individual in order to understand the whole population,” explains Dr. Morin. “At the same time you need to view the health of the individual within the context of herd health.”

On the basis of their survey findings, the food animal core curriculum has been revamped over the past 3 years to include Swine Health and Production and the two-semester course Ruminant Health and Production, which features case-based discussion sections and laboratories conducted at dairy and beef farms. Live-animal surgery laboratories have been eliminated, as have a few lecture topics; the castration lecture was expanded. A new large animal surgery elective includes live-animal surgeries.

Additional large animal experience, such as restraint and physical examination, blood draws, and passing tubes, has been incorporated into the freshman clinical orientation course.

Drs. Morin and Constable point out that Illinois practitioners had a tremendous response rate—67 percent—to their survey, and so they send a big thank-you to you for your contributions.

I too wish to thank members of the ISVMA for their invaluable involvement in the educational mission of the College, through mentoring, participating in applicant interviews, lecturing to clubs and classes, funding scholarships, and so many other activities.

And I salute our clinical faculty leaders who have sought practitioner input to guide improvements in the curriculum. The impact of their scholarship can be seen at veterinary schools around the world and in the new graduates who have mastered the skills they need to know.

Please feel free to share your comments with me at dean@cvm.uiuc.edu.

TEN REASONS WHY YOU AND YOUR STAFF SHOULD ATTEND THE 2005 CONVENTION

10. The Heart-to-Heart Social is a blast—and features lots of fabulous prizes!
9. There are more exhibitors than ever and they are offering show specials — but you must be there to use them.
8. You can attend one of three intensive courses—at a very reasonable rate. (Choose from practice management, dental radiography, and ophthalmology surgery).
7. Recent graduates have their own educational track featuring three timely topics.
6. We're partnering with the Department of Agriculture to offer IVERT Training on Friday.
5. You can fill that vacant position at the Job Fair, which will be open the entire Convention.
4. The University of Illinois and Iowa State University are having alumni reunions on Saturday night. (We're working on others—ask your alma mater to schedule one!)
3. There are more sessions in the Vet Tech/Practice Personnel track and they include both fundamental and advanced topics.
2. Kevin Fitzgerald, DVM, will make you laugh. (See page 4).
1. We're having dinner with Abraham Lincoln on Friday night.

Veterinary Medical Alumni Association President's Message

Dr. Andrew Lucyshyn

President of the University of Illinois Veterinary Medical Alumni Association

What is the greatest issue facing veterinary medicine today? We all have our response of the moment, ranging from compensation to funding for veterinary education to the increasing level of malpractice litigation. No matter what the issue is, the best way to shape a positive future for animals, owners, and the veterinary profession is by working together within a group.

Just one example of a timely issue will illustrate. Over the past 20 years or more, the veterinary profession has promoted the human-animal bond, and practitioners have invested in training, equipment, and staff to raise the quality of care. At the same time our clients' expectations have risen, and a new specialty within the legal community—animal law—has arisen. The resulting increase in the level of scrutiny of veterinary practice is not all bad; this constant review will inevitably lead to a higher standard of care.

However, the veterinary profession needs to work cooperatively to forest all the types of situations that are currently facing some specialties in human medicine here in Illinois, where increased litigation and awards have made malpractice premiums skyrocket, eclipsing the salaries of many other professions.

The answer for our profession is to be proactive rather than reactive. I encourage you to take a stand on issues such as these. To effect positive change, get involved in local and state associations and in your alumni association. Although the alumni association takes no stand on

UPDATE FROM THE STATE CAPITAL

ISVMA Supports Revised Amendment to SB2078 and HB315

CONGRATULATIONS to our ISVMA members for their superior grassroots lobbying effort on SB2078 and HB315!

For months, the proponents of these bills were unwilling to consider alternative language to address the concerns of ISVMA. WGN Radio's Steve Dale helped initiate more meaningful negotiations when he invited Senator Don Harmon (D-Oak Park) and Dr. Shelly Rubin to jointly appear on his Saturday evening radio show – Pet Central. Mr. Dale facilitated a meaningful dialogue between his two guests that led to more substantial negotiations between the various interest groups.

ISVMA met with the proponents of SB2078 and HB315 the week of April 4th to offer amendatory suggestions that would eliminate veterinarians' concerns about imposing a state tax on the rabies vaccine. As a result of these meetings, the bills' sponsors offered an agreed-upon amendment on Tuesday April 12, 2005. This amendment was the result of extensive negotiations between opponents and proponents of the original bill. These productive negotiations were initiated by Senator Harmon who showed tremendous leadership in pulling the various interests together to work out an agreement.

ISVMA has prepared an outline of the amendment. Available on the Member Center of the ISVMA webpage, visit <http://www.isvma.org/amendment.htm>.

The ISVMA Lobby Day, the hundreds of phone calls and letters from veterinarians to their legislators, and some excellent lobbying by our experienced lobbying team have made ISVMA a stronger voice in Springfield and much more capable of defending the veterinary profession.

We will continue to build our strength and credibility in the Capitol with a continually growing grassroots network. Our ultimate goal is to build capacity to control future revisions to the Veterinary Surgery and Medical Practice Act.

A GEM OF A CASE

By Kirsten Marek, DVM

Reprinted with permission from Veterinary Forum, January 2005.

It was 11:00 PM Friday night, and the expressions on my clients' faces were as worried as mine was exhausted. In the woman's arms trembled a delicate Italian greyhound puppy. His right forelimb dangled at an ominous angle, and he screamed at any movement. He had jumped off the couch and, as toy puppies often do, had apparently fractured his radius and ulna.

Behind the two owners hovered a young boy, probably 8 or 9 years old. The dark circles under his eyes and the coat pulled hastily over his pajamas indicated the speed with which his parents had rushed to my clinic. I did not welcome the sight of this child. It is my experience that overtired children exhibit two behavior patterns: whining or attention-seeking. Neither behavior contributes to my ability to practice emergency medicine.

But this child remained silent and in the background as I began my examination. Radiographs confirmed the suspected forelimb fractures, and I administered an analgesic injection and applied a splint. Throughout my work, the boy never interrupted, tried to "help," or even asked a question. When the puppy yelped as I wrapped its leg, the boy winced and turned his head, but even then he did not make a sound.

The puppy's relief after receiving analgesia and having the splint applied was considerable, and he curled up in the woman's arms and fell asleep. The owners offered me a grateful smile. I scheduled an appointment with our orthopedic surgeon for the next morning. The owners paid the bill, and as they turned to leave, the boy stepped toward me and spoke for the first time.

"This is for you," he said, uncurling an outstretched hand. "One of my crystals. Thank you for taking care of my dog."

For just a moment, the world stopped, and it was just me and this young boy — holding out a tiny piece of rock quartz. It was evident from the expression on his face that this "crystal" was one of his most prized possessions. The parents' expressions told me that his gesture was a surprise to them too — they had no idea he had brought along the rock.

Plucked from sleep and hustled out the door amidst his frantic parents and screaming puppy, he had somehow remembered to bring "payment." He had brought his treasure and offered it to me without hesitation, in pure gratitude. I knelt down, solemnly took the gift, and told him "Thank you. I will keep this forever. It is very special." Satisfied, the boy retreated back behind his parents, and they left without another word from him.

The crystal still sits on my night table, so I can see it every time I am awakened for a night emergency. I see it and am reminded why I am getting out of bed: "Thank you for taking care of my dog."

What Is Your Practice Culture?

Christine Merle DVM, University of Illinois College of Veterinary Medicine

Just how different IS ONE CLINIC from ANOTHER? Where does this difference come from? The answer is called "practice culture."

The surroundings in your practice tell a lot to your visitors. We are all aware of the dreaded smells, but what about how the staff is dressed? Do you wear a lab coat? What do the parking lot, the front entrance, and the waiting room convey about your practice? Are animals nervously shedding and panting, or are they calmly awaiting their visit? How is the hospital decorated?

Interactions between staff members, veterinarians, and animals also communicate the culture. Are there any clinic animals? If an animal is being difficult, how do you react? How does the staff work together? Are people smiling? What are the grumbles about? How do they react to an outsider's presence?

NEW CE DELIVERY METHODS INCREASE OPTIONS FOR ILLINOIS VETERINARIANS

To many veterinarians, obtaining the required CE hours for licensure renewal means registering in advance for an early bird special, booking a flight or driving to another city, making a hotel reservation, renting a car, taking time off from their clinic and families and attending a conference for a number of hours or even days. This format no longer works for many busy veterinarians who struggle to balance their professional and personal lives. Fortunately, new, more convenient options exist for veterinarians to learn about the latest surgical and medical breakthroughs in our profession.

With the aid of technology, over the past five years, CE opportunities have blossomed in ways that have veterinarians fulfilling their requirements closer to home and clinic, maybe even from their own comfy chairs. CE can be obtained by participating in an interactive online course, reading a journal article – either online or a hard copy, viewing a CD or DVD, or calling into a teleconference. Often these types of courses are accompanied by tests to ensure the participant absorbed the essential course content.

Veterinarians wonder if these high tech and handy courses are approved methods of CE. Generally, the answer is yes. However, CE requirements vary from one jurisdiction to another. Some boards require only a specific number of hours, while others mandate CE in particular subject categories. Some boards have limitations on the number of hours acceptable in certain categories such as practice management and/or restrictions of certain methods of delivery of CE. Each jurisdiction has final approval on any CE course from any source on any subject matter category.

In Illinois, CE requirements for licensed veterinarians are listed in the Practice Act Rules, Section 1500.25. It is well known that veterinarians must complete 20 hours of approved CE per renewal period. Currently, only 10 of these hours may be completed through self-study courses. Programs that are automatically approved in Illinois include courses provided by 1) AVMA Accredited Colleges of Veterinary Medicine, 2) AVMA, 3) ISVMA or regional VMA's, 4) AAHA, 5) Registry of Approved Continuing Education (RACE), administered by the American Association of the Veterinary State Boards (AAVSB), 6) Specialty organizations, and 7) Courses individually approved by the Department. If you are considering a particular CE program and need the course for completion of licensure renewal requirements, please verify that the course is approved prior to taking it by contacting the Department. Illinois veterinarians must maintain CE records for 5 years. The ISVMA will maintain a record of CE attendance for any member who requests this service and submits proof of CE attendance. The ISVMA will then provide CE verification to the Department should a CE audit occur. Contact the ISVMA office for details.

Please take note that with these new CE delivery methods widely available, requests for waiver of CE will likely be denied based solely on a veterinarian's inability to travel to a course. Greater proof of incapacity will be required. Also, the CE requirement for Illinois veterinarians is under review, including a discussion of an increase to 30 hours per renewal. If enacted, this change will not go into effect until the next renewal cycle.

DEFENDING YOUR LICENSE

Your Practice and the Law (267)

Professional Liability, vol. 22, no. 4, Fall 2003

Licensing agencies around the country are reactionary and usually only contact a veterinarian after an animal owner has reduced the specifics of his or her complaint to writing. Understanding the processes of licensing agencies can help you reduce your exposure when situations arise.

Letter of Explanation from the Veterinarian

A letter of explanation or "response letter", along with the complaint and medical records are often submitted to the licensing/disciplinary board of the agency.

Your client education pieces provide additional clues. Are they current? Are they organized? Do they promote what you recommend? Are they personalized with your clinic contact information?

Lastly, consider carefully the words that you and your staff use. Are you a hospital, clinic, or center? Are you treating pets, animals, or creatures? Are the veterinarians in your practice doctors, associates, colleagues, or employees? Do you refer to your employees as "front staff" and "back staff" or by their job titles? Do you introduce individual staff members by name? How are instructions given? How is the phone answered?

A practice's culture is in everything that you and your staff do. Is the culture that you are portraying the one that you thought you were? If not, it's time you become an observer in your own practice.

ISVMA FORUM

Following are actual questions that have recently been asked of ISVMA staff members:

Q: We have a client who is challenging our hospital policy. We will not sell heartworm preventative without having run a heartworm test for an animal. They are refusing the test and demanding we sell them the heartguard preventative. Are we within our legal rights to withhold selling the medicine?

A: From the manufacturer of the medicine to various professional societies, all experts specify that heartworm preventative is to be used jointly with the testing done in your practice. As stated by the American Heartworm Society (<http://www.heartwormsociety.org/Dogs5.htm>; May 2005), "Before starting a preventive program, all dogs that could possibly be infected with mature heartworms should be tested. Giving heartworm preventives to dogs who have heartworms can lead to severe reactions that could be harmful or even fatal to the dog."

Q: I am currently licensed to practice veterinary medicine in Illinois; however, I don't have my controlled substance license (CSL). I am taking a job at another clinic and need to apply for my CSL. How do I go about doing this?

A: All license application forms have the application for the controlled substance license. If you overlooked this section of your application, you can either phone the Illinois Department of Finance and Public Regulation, Application Unit at (217) 782-8556 or you can refer to their Website to download an application at www.idfpr.com.

Please call ISVMA, send us an email, or call with any questions you may have. With permission, we may print your question, along with the researched answer, in the next issue of EPITOME.

The letter of explanation is not a forum for expressing outrage. The state's licensing/disciplinary board must have the veterinarian's response in order to make a decision as to whether the owner's complaint has any merit. Accordingly, the veterinarian's response letter should specifically address the issues contemplated by the owner's complaint and provide reasoning for the veterinarian's care.

In some jurisdictions, veterinarians are not provided with documentation of the complaint. They may be advised only of the section of the Act which may have been violated—if the complainant's allegations are true. Veterinarians may be provided with abbreviated allegations of "gross negligence" or "unprofessional conduct" by some agencies.

In those instances, it may be advisable to contact the representative of the licensing agency that sent the request to determine if more facts are available in order to provide an informed response. If further information is not provided, the veterinarian may have to provide a significant amount of narrative of the care provided.

If it is a "quality of care" issue, the veterinarian should provide an explanation regarding assessment, diagnosis, plan and course of treatment. While another veterinarian may ultimately be reviewing your response, this veterinarian may have different ideas regarding the applicable standard of care under the circumstances.

Veterinarians are not precluded from consulting with an attorney to prepare their response. If a veterinarian has a "history" with the licensing/disciplinary agency, it may be advisable to retain counsel early.

A majority of cases are closed when the agency reviews the veterinarian's response. If the case is not closed, it can (1) be reduced to a formal complaint; (2) be referred for further investigation; or (3) be scheduled for a conference with the veterinarian.

Conference with the Licensing Agency

Conferences can be informal in nature, with no records kept. Some states record the conference and advise the veterinarian that statements made during the conference can be used against them. The conference may be attended by a Department attorney, a veterinarian on the licensing/disciplinary board and/or the assigned investigator. The animal owner is seldom present.

Typically, the purpose of the conference is to get more information from the veterinarian or to resolve the matter pursuant to an agreement. The agreed resolution may involve the veterinarian consenting to a disciplinary action to his or her license. Depending on the state, discipline can range from reprimand to revocation. Definitive periods of suspension can be levied, or probationary periods that require certain conditions to be met. These probationary conditions can include continuing medical education, financial sanctions, or future monitoring by the licensing agency.

Some states have non-disciplinary dispositions. These dispositions can be characterized as "warnings" to the veterinarians to refrain from the complained-of conduct in the future.

In almost every state, a conference disposition that involves discipline must be consented to by the veterinarian. (1) While the agency can make a recommendation for resolution pursuant to an agreed-upon discipline, the veterinarian, in almost every circumstance, is not compelled to accept the recommendation of discipline. The veterinarian may reject the recommendation for discipline.

If a disposition is agreed upon at the conference, it may still have to be approved by a veterinary board and/or a figurehead of the agency. The dispositive order should be drafted so that it disposes of all matters contemplated by the owner's complaint.

Formal Process

If a disposition is not agreed upon at the conference, and the licensing agency is intent upon disciplining the veterinarian's license, the matter can be reduced to a formal complaint. Once a formal complaint is filed by the licensing agency the complaint may become public, meaning anyone may be able to gain access to the complaint and learn of the specific charges levied by the animal owner and the agency.

A prosecutor or attorney may be employed by the agency, or a state's attorney general may prosecute licensing matters. An Administrative Law Judge typically presides over the hearings, making rulings on issues of law. Often, at least one member of the licensing/disciplinary board will attend the hearing. A record is made of the proceeding, and a recommendation subsequent to the conclusion of the hearing may or may not be made by the Administrative Law Judge. The board in most cases will deliberate on the evidence and make a decision with respect to whether a violation of the state's Practice Act (the Act) has been established at the hearing. Some boards' decisions are final, and some decisions are reviewable by a figurehead of the Department.

The hearings are run much like a trial. Opening and closing statements are offered, witnesses are examined and cross-examined, documentation is taken as evidence and rulings of law are made with respect to the propriety of evidence.

A veterinarian will sometimes have a right to file a motion to reconsider the agency's decision. In almost all cases, the veterinarian has a right to "administrative review." By filing a petition with the local court, the veterinarian requests that the court review the administrative order handed down by the agency.

The agency's burden of proof varies from state to state. Some states may have to establish a violation of the Act by a "preponderance of the evidence", with other states needing to present "clear and convincing evidence" of a violation. In some states, several months, if not years, can pass between the time of an owner's initial complaint and the final order of the agency.

Be Prepared

Familiarize yourself with the Act and the specific violation of the Act that has been charged. The licensing agency typically will provide a copy of the Act free of charge. Each state has a set of violations reflected within the Act. However, a specific violation can be well-defined (conviction of a crime/failing to provide proof of continuing education) to violations that are open to interpretation by the veterinary board (gross malpractice/unprofessional conduct). More and more veterinarians are becoming the targets of litigation.

An increasing number of states are considering permitting greater legal recoveries to animal owners. Many states' licensing agencies' rules provide that information secured prior to the filing of a formal complaint must remain confidential. However, when a lawsuit for damages is filed by an owner against a veterinarian, it is usually just a matter of time before the owner's attorney attempts to secure this information through a discovery process in the civil courts.

Reduce Your Exposure Through Communication, Good Record Keeping, and Insurance Protection

Communication with clients and proper record keeping are key. Hard feelings over fees often result in complaints to the licensing agency. Many complaints voiced to licensing agencies are in response to collection actions initiated by the veterinarian. Once a complaint is filed and records are secured for a licensing board's review, poor record keeping is sometimes a basis for the complaint not being closed early in the process. You do not want to attend a conference to interpret handwriting or explain charts and figures.

ISVMA BIDS FAREWELL TO LIFE MEMBER DR. KENNETH C. PERRY

Dr. Kenneth C. Perry, 83, founder and owner of the Forest Glen Animal Hospital on Chicago's Far Northwest Side died of heart failure in his home on March 18.

Dr. Perry was born and raised in Grand Rapids, Michigan. During World War II, he was an aviation cadet with the Navy until his discharge in February 1943. Two months later, he joined the Army, eventually becoming part of the 9th Combat Cargo Squadron that was activated in 1944 to India. He was discharged as a sergeant in December 1946 after earning numerous medals, stripes and ribbons, including four Bronze Stars.

Upon leaving the Army, he attended Michigan State University and earned his bachelor's degree and graduate degree in veterinary medicine. He worked in a veterinary practice in his hometown before moving to and joining a practice in Chicago.

While working there, he met and married one of the veterinary technicians, Blanche Suchak. They got married in 1956 and moved to the Forest Glen neighborhood where his bride had lived since she was a young girl. Four years later they bought an empty grocery store and remodeled it into the animal hospital.

He and his wife shared a zest for traveling, with veterinary medical conferences offering opportunities to indulge their hobby. They visited South America, Egypt, Russia and the Czech Republic. They traveled the world several times.

Known for his quiet nature and love of animals, the welcome mat at their home was always out for stray and abandoned animals. "They had lots of animals over the years, hundreds," according to his niece, Kathleen Decker. "The house was constantly full of animals, cats and dogs. It was nothing for them to have three dogs and a dozen cats. Their home was like a little wayward shelter."

Although known for being very quiet and low-key, Dr. Perry often shared his insights through his sense of humor. His classic one-liners were his signature and have been often repeated and shared.

Services were held at Corcoran Funeral Home, Chicago. Memorials and donations are being accepted by the Forest Glen Animal Hospital Rescue Fund, (773)736-3833.

response letter, conferencing with the licensing agency, and attending hearings (subject to policy terms, limitations and exclusions).

Terry Takash is an attorney with the law firm of Johnson & Bell, Ltd. in Chicago. He has been defending veterinarians from malpractice claims and licensing actions for several years. Mr. Takash is the former Chief of Prosecutions with the Illinois Department of Professional Regulation.

(1) Some states have "summary suspensions" under "emergency" situations. Typically, summary suspensions of a license take place without notice to the veterinarian and only when the continuing practice of the veterinarian would pose imminent danger to animals/public. Also, at least one state can discipline a veterinarian's license without affording the veterinarian a hearing.

Veterinary Education Online

In October of 2004, the University of Illinois - College of Veterinary Medicine began offering a Web-based continuing education program specifically developed for busy veterinarians looking to enhance their knowledge and increase their clinical skills. Veterinary Education Online (VEO) delivers professionally developed, university-level courseware in an interactive environment. All that is required to complete the CE course is a computer and Internet access.

Getting started is quick and easy and the cost is just a fraction of typical CE courses. Visit the ISVMA home page and click on the VEO button. You will immediately be linked to the courses and other information on VEO homepage. Check out how VEO can be a smart alternative in obtaining your continuing education requirements.

FULL-TIME EMERGENCY VETERINARIAN

General Practice and Emergency -
Working as a Patient Care Team!

Dundee Animal Hospital is a three-location AAHA certified small animal practice located in the Northwest suburbs of Chicago, Illinois. In addition to the general medicine practice at each of our locations, we provide 24-hour emergency services at our central hospital in East Dundee. Founded in 1958, we have established an excellent reputation within the community and have a substantial client base. We enjoy the distinction of having one of the largest professional staffs in the Midwest consisting of 20 doctors and 80+ support staff members, including a Practice Administration Team to support the medical professionals' needs.

This position will compliment an existing staff of emergency doctors and a support staff specifically trained in emergency medicine. Responsibilities include the treatment of emergency patients from our three hospitals and other area hospitals with an average caseload of 7 - 11 patients per night, or 10 - 15 patients on the Sunday day shift. Other duties involve surgery, and the monitoring and continual care of all admitted and transferred hospitalized patients.

This full-time position offers: (1) Salary commensurate with experience and qualifications; (2) Medical, dental, life insurance; (3) Stability and opportunity for personal growth and development; (4) Pension/401(k) plan; (5) Flexible work schedule; AND (6) Continuing education allowance.

Rich in history and diverse in character, the Fox River Valley communities are cozy places to live, work and raise a family. With the great city of Chicago approximately 40 miles east, our location offers the best of both worlds: urban and rural lifestyles that offer an endless mix of cultural, educational, recreational and sporting opportunities!

Our focus at Dundee Animal Hospital is on teamwork, flexibility, and dedication to quality care. We treat each animal as if it were our own, with great compassion and unsurpassed professionalism. If you are interested in learning more about this exciting opportunity, please contact Debra Sisson, Practice Administrator, at (847) 428-6114, or fax your resume to (847) 428-8213. You may also e-mail inquiries to us at dsisson@dundeeanimalhospital.com.

FULL-TIME OR PART-TIME VETERINARIAN

F/T or P/T Associate Veterinarian wanted for a four-doctor, full service, small animal practice just 30 miles south of Chicago. Seeking a caring, self-motivated, team-oriented associate with excellent people skills. Competitive salary, medical, dental, 401-K and buy-in potential. Surgical skills a plus. Please mail resume to Dr. Locke, Glenwood Village Pet Hospital, 555 E. Glenwood-Lansing Road, Glenwood IL 60425, (708) 758-2400 or Fax to (708) 758-2950.

Policy for Classified Advertising

Any classified ad purchased will be posted upon receipt on the ISVMA webpage and the next available edition of the newsletter, the "Epitome". The webpage ad will run through the end of the publication date of the "Epitome" in which it will appear. It will be the responsibility of each advertiser to contact the ISVMA for omissions and errors. MEMBERS: ISVMA members will pay a discounted rate of $25.00 for the first 35 words and $0.25 for each additional word. This is a combined rate for publication on the website and in the Epitome. NON-MEMBERS: The rate for any non-member veterinarian is $40.00 for the first 35 words and $0.35 for each additional word. In addition, a fee of $10.00 will be assessed for placement on the ISVMA website. Each advertiser may determine whether they would like to purchase the ad for placement on the web or waive that purchase. There is no option at this time to purchase just a webpage ad for non-members.
